- To SHO'VEL. v. a. [from the noun.]
 1. To throw or heap with a shovel.
 I thought
 To die upon the bed my father dy'd,
 To lie close by his honest bones; but now
 Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me
 Where no priest shovels in dust. Shaksf. Winter's Tale.
 2. To gather in great quantities.
 Ducks shovel them up as they swim along the waters; but divers insects also devour them. Dorham.
 SHO'VELBORD. n. f. [shovel and board.] A long board on which they play by sliding metal pieces at a mark.

 The shouting for thy summer fruits and harvest is tallen. If.
 He storms and shouts; but flying bullets now
 To execute his rage appear too slow:
 They miss, or sweep but common souls away;
 For such a loss Opdam his life must pay. Waller.
 There had been nothing but howlings and shouting of post naked men, belabouring one another with fragg'd ticks. Mason.
 All clad in skins of beasts the jav'lin bear,
 And shrieks and shoutings rend the suff'ring air. Dryden.
 What hinders you to take the man you love?
 The people will be glad, the soldier shout;
 And Betran, though repining, will be w'd. Dryden.
 SHOUT. n. f. [from the verb.] A loud and vehement cry of triumph or exhortation.
 Thanks, gentle citizens:
 This general applause, and cheerful shout,
 Argues your wisdom and your love to Richard. Shaksf. H. IV.
